

KRIEGER JURY IS STILL INCOMPLETE

Accept 11 Talesmen but New Venire Necessary to Fill Box.

Failing to obtain the twelfth juror yesterday for the trial of Charles Krieger on the charge of dynamiting the J. E. Poy residence in this city October 29, 1917, the jury was excused in charge of the halliffs yesterday afternoon with orders to report at 9 o'clock Monday morning. At that time 25 additional jurors from the county will report on orders of the sheriff at the court's direction, in an effort to obtain the one juror needed.

Following is the jury as now selected, which with the addition of one man, will hear the testimony in the Krieger case:

W. C. Bryant, Leonard, Mose Conner, Leonard, W. R. Eoff, Tulsa, J. E. Weatherston, Bixby, J. A. Gilling, Tulsa, William Hinton, Tulsa, G. A. Jackson, Tulsa, Jake Laberman, Tulsa, W. R. Martin, Mounds, C. E. Morris, Bixby, R. C. Woodward, Tulsa.

The jury panel of 400 men was exhausted yesterday afternoon shortly after 3 o'clock and the judge instructed Sheriff Wootley to bring 25 men into the court Monday morning that the one juror might be obtained. A Nicodemus, assistant district attorney, who has charge of the state's case in the selection of the jury, stated yesterday it is probable the state's evidence would be completed Thursday.

Howard Is Optimistic of Future

Oscar R. Howard.

By W. H. PECK.

Oscar R. Howard, one of the pioneer oil operators of Tulsa, and his charming wife are in the city, stopping at Hotel Tulsa. They came from their winter home in Pasadena so that Mr. Howard might attend the Osage lease sale, and look after his large oil interests and properties here.

A unique distinction, for which he has never received proper credit, belongs to Mr. Howard in the fact that he drilled the first deep well south of the Arkansas river. This was in 1901 at Red Fork. Previous to Mr. Howard's far-sighted move, only one shallow well had been drilled in this region. The Howards were closely identified with the making of Tulsa from early days, and while he was bodily initiating the new oil enterprise, Mrs. Howard was actively interested in promoting social and musical interests. Mrs. Howard was one of the charter members of the Hyperion club, and is herself a musician of ability. At their California home Mrs. Howard maintains a string of thoroughbred Kentucky saddle horses which are known up and down the coast, and much pictured in the journals of the Golden state.

As Mr. Howard ran the first oil in a pipe line south of Tulsa, and in addition made the first deep test well, he has seen the city and its roads develop from small beginnings into a wonderful field. In an interview he stated that he had watched the country develop into its present productive state, and that he always had confidence in it, watching its progress from that early date. He predicts a wonderful future for the oil business during the coming year, and says that the demand for gas and oil by residents are at present simply enormous. Illustrating this condition, he points out that at present time the state of California has only a few or three weeks supply of gasoline on hand. In fact he states that some large dealers in gasoline are trying to negotiate with him for shipments of kerosene to California.

Speaking of the financial situation in the United States, Mr. Howard stated that he has met many business men of large interests in the past 60 days on the coast, and while financial conditions are somewhat closer than they have been, the impression generally among them is that the labor situation and congested conditions of railroad transportation will soon adjust themselves and things will return to normal. He feels that there is no reason to be alarmed over present conditions, and that if the federal reserve banks will only fulfill the mission for which they were created, and reduce interest rates, things will adjust themselves much quicker.

He says there is no reason why the federal reserve banks should be charging high interest rates, while the public in general is carrying government bonds at low rates of interest, with a correspondingly large loss. Mr. Howard concluded the interview by declaring his pleasure at finding Tulsa at the present time in such a sound and flourishing financial condition.
